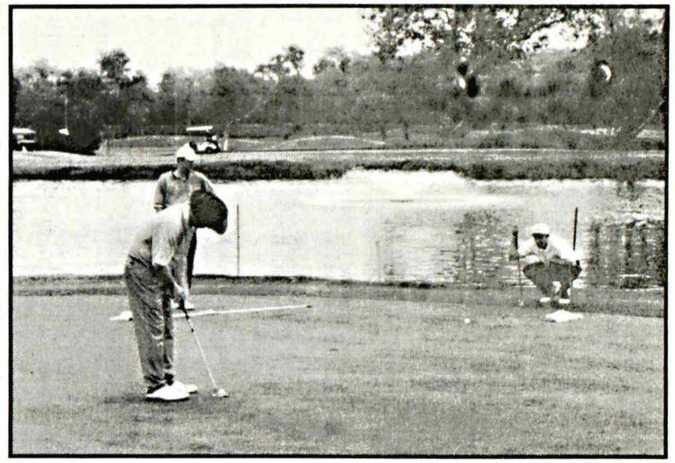
Golf East County

by Norrie West



Players putt out on the 18th Green at Carlton Oaks Country Club in Santee.

If you're an East County resident wanting to play a round of golf, you need not look far.

We now have 11 public golf courses totaling 198 holes of golf – -in El cajon Jamul, La Mesa, Spring Valley and Santee plus those in Warner Springs and Ramona.

And, in time, there will be 45 more holes of golf when the in-the-works El Capitan golf facility, designed by El Cajon's Dave Fleming, is opened, scheduled for two years down the road, (dirt starting to move in six months).

Today's array of golfing venues in our area is a far cry from the middle 50s when the only courses were Lakeside's nine-hole layout and Flying Hills, a regulation 18 near Gillespie Field in El Cajon.

Lakeside, renamed Willowbrook, is still going, but Flying Hills vanished many years ago.

After Flying Hills came Singing Hills in 1956, first with 18 holes, then adding 36 more.

After Singing Hills, courses were added in Santee at Carlton Oaks (1960) in Ramona at San Vicente (1972) and Mount Woodson (1991, in El Cajon at Cottonwood (1963), which is called now Rancho San Diego with 36 holes, in Jamul at Steele Canyon (1991) with 27 holes, in Warner Springs at Warner's Ranch (1962) and in La Mesa at Sun Valley with a 9-hole, Par 35 course..

Singing Hills is, of course, in east El Cajon, up Willow road from Rancho San Diego, lost some of the course in the winter of 1979-80. Heavy rainfall for three consecutive years swelled the Sweetwater River, stranding the championship Willow Glen course.

It also washed away 40 acres of soil, mostly from Oak Glen, the original 18 hole course, and from Pine Glen, now a par-3 venue.

When Cecil Hollingsworth first looked at the property where Singing Hills is now, the year was 1955 and most folks thought he and his three partners were crazy to even consider building a course "so far from the city."

Singing Hills has hosted two USGA Junior Amateur championships, in 1971 and 1973 (won by San Diegan Jack Renner) and the 1956 San Diego Open.

It has also been the site, for some years, of the 11-12 division and girls 13-14 of the Junior World Championships.

Carlton Oaks, site of the 1974 NCAA Colt Championships, was rebuilt by Dye Design in 1985 and still is one of the finest in our county. -

Like Carlton Oaks, Rancho San Diego was purchased by Japanese investors in the 80s. It was still called Cottonwood when the 1979-80 flood came roaring through the clubhouse, depositing a coat of mud on Monte Vista course, and eating away some of the longer Ivanhoe track.

Almost next-door to Rancho San Diego, Steele Canyon is an unusual three-course layout, nine holes each,

CCT's sixth 'Traditions of Christmas' ends run tonight

by Greg Eichelberger

Christian Community Theater is wrapping up its sixth version of "Traditions of Christmas," the brainchild of director Paul Russell upon seeing a similar show at New York's Radio City Music Hall in 1991.

"I wanted to bring a little of that same pageantry and professionalism to the East County," he said. "Now that we're in our sixth year, I think we've succeeded — a little bit."

Consisting of 12 segments, including "Christmas Around the World," "Christmas Across The U.S.A.," "March Of The Toy Soldiers," "Winter Wonderland," "A Christmas Carol," and "The Living Nativity," among others, the whole enterprise takes about two-and-a-half hours, but feels like only an hour or so. That's the key, the vignettes are brief and to the point, allowing maximum entertainment, with minimum audience restlessness.

Over 130 participants, all clothed by costume designer Terri Davis, brings these playlets to life on the stage, while just as many unseen (and often under-appreciated) individuals assist behind it.

My favorites, besides the ever-popular "Living Nativity," in which real goats, sheep and a camel are used, was the "Stomp" segment of the "Christmas Across The U.S.A." section.

Dressed as lumberjacks, several CCT young men began to chop at a large plastic log with equally faux hatchets until a recognizable "Jingle Bells" was heard. It was quite imaginative and went over very well.

I also enjoyed, like last year, the "Norman Rockwell Christmas," in which Joseph Jones, as American icon and painter Norman Rockwell, tells us about his favorite holiday "Saturday Evening Post" creations. Those are then re-enacted by live performers (standing very still) in a stunning and heart-tugging sequence.

Another spectacular (though far less emotional) scene takes place during "March Of The Toy Soldiers," as first a group of kids, then young adults, prance in perfect unison, creating a sea of white and scarlet choreography (by Vivian Valade) that would make June Taylor blush.

A salute to the Rockettes also shows that CCTers can dance as well as act and sing. Dozens of spirited and solemn seasonal tunes are belted out in (mostly) perfect pitch by solos, duos, trios, quartets, whole chorals and so on, backed by a 25-piece orchestra conducted by Harvey Tellinghuisen.

In "A Christmas Carol," Ken Rose (nominated for an Eastie for Best Actor in last year's version) again excels as the crotchety Ebenezer Scrooge, whose stingy life is transformed by a visit from three ghosts.

My only problem with this was that it was too short and veered away from many touching aspects included in Dickens' original tale, aspects that could have been presented with no great time length added.

Another slight disappointment was the "Christmas Bells" section. While the concept was wonderful and the children cute and all, it was obvious that they were not ringing the bells.

The audience seemed to react much more enthusiastically to scenes in which the performers camped it up a bit, while acting a bit more reserved towards the rather ordinary seasonal scenes.

The finale, the Nativity scene, always brings us back to why we celebrate the holiday in the first place.

It also seldom fails to bring a tear to the eye, either.

A new twist this year had audience members standing up and singing along during the closing "Hallelujah Chorus" by Handel. It put just the right spiritual touch on the entire evening.

Overall, it was a fun and fine fashion in which to spend an evening.

One, hopefully, that will allow us to forget all the bad things and dwell, even for a moment or two, on all of our blessings.

Bright planets surround moon

Early this evening, the moon is nearly midway between the two brightest planets: One-half hour after sunset, find the crescent moon in south-southwest. Jupiter is high in southern sky, 34 degrees to moon's upper left, while Venus is low in southwest, nearly as far to moon's lower right. As sky darkens, extend the moon-Jupiter line leftward to Saturn in southeast and Aldebaran in east. For rest of month, watch the moon move along that line. On Wednesday, an hour before sunup, look low in southeast for Mercury with Antares 6 degrees lower right.

Tomorrow night, an hour before sunrise on Thursday, look in south-southeast to south to find Mars and Spica 10 degrees apart and closing. They are nearly equal in brightness, at first magnitude, but differ in color.

Thursday night, an hour after sunset, high in the sky just west of due south, find the crescent moon, one-third full. Bright Jupiter is 7 degrees to its upper left. Look again on Friday evening.

Golf courses

designed by Cary Player. The nines, Valley, Ranch and Canyon are real tests of golf, with some spectacular holes.

La Mesa's little Sun Valley, now run by Johhny Gonzales and Barry Mahlberg on a long-term lease with the city, finally has a watering system and looks the best it has for many years.

It is short, 1,026 yards, but is fun to play.

East County green fees vary considerably. You will need a starting time as you might guess, and, if you haven't played the course, you should ask the cost.

The courses are all quite playable. It depends on what you like in the way of holes and sometimes whether you like to walk or ride.

East County teams see lots of tournament action

With the start of the regular winter season for the high schools just a couple of weeks away, the teams have been involved in tournaments everywhere one looks.

The majority of the tournaments involve basketball, but there was also a major girls soccer tournament sponsored by Bonita Vista High School and a couple of wrestling tournaments as well.

In that girls soccer tournament, two Grossmont League Schools came away with championships, El Capitan in the Unlimited Division and Santana in the Limited Division.

In addition, Granite Hills was edged by the host school, Bonita Vista, 1-0 in the premier finals and Helix lost to USDHS in the semifinals in the Unlimited Division.

In boys basketball, Granite Hills won the Ramona Roundball Shootout over San Dieguito Academy by a lopsided 52 - 24 score.

Tournaments are entered by schools as a way of preparing for their upcoming league play by giving younger players a chance to get experience against teams from outside their league.

Several schools in the Grossmont League sponsor tournaments, usually in conjunction with other schools.

Boys Basketball

One early tournament was the Eagle (Granite Hills) - Vaquero (El Capitan) which started on Dec. 8. Scores of Grossmont League teams in that tournament (Dec. 8 - 12), were as follows:

Fallbrook 74, Mount Miguel 51
Escondido 80, El Capitan 78
Mt. Miguel 66, Mt. Carmel 63
Granite Hills 58, Mira Mesa 45
Mount Miguel 68, Mira Mesa 57
El Capitan 81, Kearny 49
El Camino 69, Granite Hills 68
El Capitan 84, Morse 65

Another league-sponsored tournament was the Foothiller (Grossmont) -Sultan (Santana) Tournament which started Dec. 7.

Results included the following scores involving league teams:

Santana 50, Mar Vista 46
Orange Glen 85, Grossmont 82 (Overtime)
Valhalla 59, Patrick Henry 42
Orange Glen 75, Valhalla 59
Southwest 78, Grossmont 59
Santana 53, Ramona 44

Other tournaments that started about the same time included the High 5/Trojan (Castle Park) included the following results for East County teams:

El Cajon 86, Hoover 65
El Cajon 106, Castle Park 45
El Cajon 85, Marian Catholic 82

The Hilltop High School Tournament included the following scores:

Chula Vista 50, Monte Vista 45
Helix 66, RBV 58
Monte Vista 53, Sweetwater 48
Helix 66, Hilltop 47

That same week was the San Diego Small School Tournament which saw Christian only losing in the final against Green Hill by a 77-68 score. The other scores for Christian were:

Christian 93, Mountain Empire 34
Christian 95, Mount Vernon 46.
Christian 69, SF Christian 49
Christian 58, Valley Center 52

Other tournament results for Grossmont League and Christian which started the following week included:
